

THIS IS MY RESUME

OBJECTIVE: To begin my post-graduate career in an insignificant, entry-level position that will provide me with income (preferably valid United States currency) and a sense of self-worth.

EDUCATION:

- Small College You Haven't Heard Of, Bachelor of Arts, May 2011
- Town You Also Haven't Heard Of, South Carolina
- Major: Blah Blah Liberal Arts Interdisciplinary Blah
- GPA: Same as Everyone Else's/ Irrelevant to a Real Job

SKILLS PROFILE:

- COMMUNICATION: I communicate, yes. Want to know how many ways I can communicate? All the ways. That's right. Need me to say stuff? I can do that. Want me to type some stuff? Done. Talk on the phone? Call me right now and guess what: I'll ANSWER SO POLITELY IT WILL AMAZE YOU.
- CLERICAL SKILLS: I'm a child of the information age, so really it's silly to have me list this stuff. I've been using MS Word since I was like seven. Pull out your laptop right now and let's have a PowerPoint contest. Do you know how many A+ presentations I've made in ten minutes? Don't have ten minutes? Give me five: BOOM, B-.

RELEVANT EXPERIENCE:

None really, but please allow me to articulate the many reasons why I think my minimum-wage work history is extremely relevant and has adequately prepared me for this job.
